SPECIAL

HEAT STROKE IN DOGS

When a dog is exposed to high temperatures, heat stroke can result. Heat stroke is a very serious condition that requires immediate medical attention. Dogs do not sweat through their skin like humans – they release heat primarily by panting and they sweat through their foot pads. If a dog cannot effectively expel heat, the internal body temperature begins to rise. Signs of heat stroke can include, raised body temperature, vigorous panting, dark red gums, lethargy, and vomiting.

If you suspect heat stroke, you must take immediate action. First, move your dog out of the heat and away from the sun right away. Begin cooling your dog by placing cool, wet rags or washcloths on the body. DO NOT use ice or very cold water! Extreme cold can cause the blood vessels to constrict, preventing the body's core from cooling. Offer your dog cool water, but do not force water into your dog's mouth. Call your vet right away – even if your dog seems better.

Prevention

NEVER leave your dog alone in the car on a warm day, regardless of whether the windows are open. Even if the weather outside is not extremely hot, the inside of a car acts like an oven.

Avoid vigorous exercise on hot days.

Make sure outside dogs have access to shade.

Keep fresh cool water available at all times.
